Goldie DeWitt 1DOWN

In the summer of 1996, a organization was birthed, and they were all in search of the American Dream.

One of them found it on his computer in the Inland Empire...wealth, power and passion beyond his wildest dreams.

He was Goldie DeWitt. The world will remember him by another name ...1DOWN.

He lived every mans dream. With no regrets.

What's real and what's fake? Is the fakeness in this world so real that we all pretty much live in fakeness more than we realize? Is this actually becoming reality? How can a woman get some fake books and say she wants a real man? Why do men ah over fake books but prefer real ones? It's not the fakeness that's fucking us up, it's us! I miss just regular ol' normal people, regular simple problems, easy questions, easy answers, cheap gas, nice happy people and group gatherings with fun people. Seem like those days are gone. Things are very complex and drama floats through the air more than second hand smoke, and there both deadly. Unfortunately this is where time has taken us and this is part of life's challenge. This will not get easier, so to counter punch this shit, you just gotta stay sharp and keep your head up and make smart life decisions. You're responsible for yourself.
